ATTRACTIONS THERE-FISHING-BAILING-BATHING IN THE SURF-FORT MONROE-THE BIG GUN GATLIN BATTERY-MUSEUM-OLD FORT WOOL-HAMPTON, &C. [Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.]

OLD POINT COMFORT. VA., August 10, 1875. I hardly know where to begin in relating the pleasures and attractions of this historical place unless with the beginning of its attractions to me. The landing at the wharf during the heavy storm of last Saturday night, when, midst the grand salutes of heaven's artiflery, the gleams of lightning lit up the foam-capped waves, revealing bright glimpses of grim Fortress Monroe frowning black with guns, and lighting us across the broad pier, trembling with shocks from the charges of Neptupe, to the hospitable Hygeia Hotel, where the genial face of mine bost Picebus (not Appollo) greets us with a charges, and Phabas in the Temple of Hygeia. Then the sweet night's rest that followed. and continues to follow every night I stay. Ye denizens of the metropolis, wearing the night away with your restless tossings on your heated couches, your slumber broken by the jar of a passing train, the sbrick of an engine, or the rattle of wheels under your windows, cut ioose awhite from your cares and labors and try a berth by the sea. Rest your wearied head on one of Phæbus's pillows of softest down, and with your fevered brow fanned by the gentle breezes from the capes, and lulled by the musical fla-h of the waves on the beach the night long, you will sleep the sweet sicep of the child, and rise with the treshness and vigor of the mountain roc. And the fishing, and sailing, and shooting. On! such fishing, and sailing, and shooting! I am afraid to tell you what luck we had yesterday and to-day in that little yacht as we lay over there by the Rip Raps; how we, triend Crew, from the capital, and a Baltimore man, pulled in the trout, the croakers, and the spots, hand over hand, faster than one man could bait our books and another take off the 6-h-sometimes two on one hook-till the bottom of the boat was covered with the bouncing, pouting wealth of the sea; and when wearied with the sport, we "upped" with the anchor and scudded before the stiff breeze, our little Emma Lee riding the billows like a swan. and with the speed of the sea-gull bore us quickly back over the three miles of blue water to the friends who kunged the morning lazily away on the piazza-wouldn't go along, because, as they said, "you can't catch anything." Guess there won't be boatroom for the fishermen to-morrow.

Now for a bath in the surf before dinner. To-day it is splendid-equal to Cobb's Island. How we roll, and dive, and float, and make the girls scream, and get up such an appetite for dinner that we verily believe the lamb, ducks, chickens, crabs,&c.,(I won't give the bill of fare,) would have bardly held out if we hadn't brought in our fish as a reserve. and melons. Don't know where they come from, but here they are. Watermelons at three and five cents. What will they think of that at home, where they are not halfgrown? I even saw very good ones the other day in Suffolk at one cent apiece. But I must not quit Old Point, tired as I equipped fort in the United States, and is in the world. One huge piece, lately cast at Pittsburgh, and not yet mounted, lies on the sand of the beach, looking at a distance like a monetar sunning himself. It weighs twenty tons, and carries a 1200-pound may be complete, while all the bodily senses "ten miles," we are told. It's a hard. In what that craftness. 1200-pound ball and not move a muscle There are the Gatlin guns, too, which are nothing more than Colt's revolvers on a and firing one hundred and twenty times in a minute. "Lives there a man with soul so dead" as to face that battery? The ordnance museum in the fort is well worth a visit, and the courteous, well-informed librarian will tell you more about guns, pistols, powder. nitro-glycerine, shot, shell, rams, and torpedoes in an hour than you would bear at home in a lifetime, blustrating and explaining everything as he goes, with his neat and pretty models and specimens. The United States Artiflery School is located here, and there are a number of young artillery officers being instructed in their murderous calling. General Barry is the commandant at present, though now absent temporarily from the post. The place is garrisoned by five companies of regulars—a good-looking, well-drilled body of men—who make a fine appearance on dress-parade. The visitor at Fortress Monroe will notice a large, unfinished work a mile or two out in the channel having a very formidable appearance. This is old Fort Wool, now generally called the Rip-Raps, and was commenced before the war, the earth upon which it is built and the immense masses of granite used in its construction having all been brought to the all a waste. The severe experiences with heavy ordnance and steel projectiles during the late war established the fact that brick and stone offer no successful resistance to such modes of attack, and the great work has been abandoned, As I lay under its shadow to day and fished among the huge granite boulders brought there at such expense, how sad seemed the useless outlay in view of the existing poverty of the old State; and had I a magician's wand to have restored those granite blocks to their vative beds and the money which placed them there into our exhausted treasury, where would be the State debt? I had intended saying something about the new old town of Hampton, which, it will be recollected, was fired and destroyed in 1861 by its own citizens to convince the North that they were in dead earnest in their loyalty to the Confederacy; and of such was the whole South.

I had intended giving you some dots also on the "nigger's pride" (the Hampton Normal Institute, a good thing after its fashion.) and the Invalid Soldiers' Home, with its corps-I might almost say corpse, they are so shaky-of maimed and decrepit veterans, but put elaborate arguments into their mouths, my drooping lids warn me of the midnight hour, and these numbered sheets of the value of space in the Dispatch. There is a law of periodic rest which is universal in its application. The successive periods of creation are distinguished by an afternate evening and morning-a sight of repose followed by a day of activity. After the nebulous matter, that had been without form and void," had become condensed into a solid wass, for a time "darkness was upon the face of the deep," and the great, watery ball swung dead and silent in the expanse. kindly welcome. Classical to begin with, Interior fires smoulder quietly in their centrai oven; the waters-tideless and waveess-slumber peacefully above; while the creative spirit broads over the placid bosom of the deep. At tast the word is said, "Let there be light." The darkness vanishes, morning breeks, and the round world shines tike a globe of sliver.

Then there comes another long night of stillness and repose, during which the elements are preparing themselves for a further period of activity and life. The inner fire has been meiting, tusing, crystatizing, and gradually weakening the superincumbent strats, when suddenly the depths of the sea are troubled, and islands, comments, and mountains are beaved up into the air, while the waters subside into the walleys. Then the winds begin to blow, the rain descends upon the rough rocks, wearing away their surface, electric and chemical forces prepare the way for vegetable life, and a rack verdure, in process of time, covers the face of the earth. As the evening of the third day draws on there comes another grand convulsion, and the ferns and the flowers and the huge trees sink down into the depths. there to be changed into curbon and stored away to meet the pecessities of the age in which we live. And soft proceeded, by alternate seasons of rest and action, until all things were finished and man appeared upon the stage.

The same law still prevails in every department of nature. Every year the trees strip off the covering which they had worn. The earth wraps itself up in its coverlet of snow, and the silent slumber of winter reigns profound. Every day the flower that followed the sun so lovingly while he shone folds its little bands at evening and bends its head and sleeps. Here and there we find a rollicking cereus that never opens its painted in the darkness, it must rest at noonday.

The winds and the waters sleep-well for us that they do; but the sounder they sleep, the more terrible are they when they wake; the profounder the calm, the fiercer is the hurricane which tollows. Even the metals peed to have their periodic rest; an iron Such a place this is, too, for vegetables, fruit, wheel kept in incessant motion for too long a period of time loses its cohesive power and flies in pieces.

It is also said that stone, if it were exposed to constant sunlight and with no chance to sleep at night, would become disintegrated and crumble away. Every organ of the buman body needs to have its special season of rest. The lungs must have their brief period of repose between each successive inspiration; the heart pauses for an instant in the whose embattled walls overlook our back pi- interval between each pulsation, and every one knows to his sorrow that if the digestive functions are forced to work too steadily they it. This is the largest and most thoroughly will avenge themselves upon the gormandizer. But for this fact many of the organs manned with some of the heaviest ordnance of the body would get no rest at all; for

In what that ordinary sleep consists it is tale to swallow; but from the looks of that not easy to say. Of course every one knows gun's throat I believe it can swallow the what it is as a matter of experience, although no man was ever conscious of the precise moment when he fell into oblivion. We all know what it is to be sleepy when we feel large scale, mounted on artillery carriages, that we ought to be wide awake, and what it is to be wakeful when we ought to be

There are certain positions of the body which are favorable to sleep, and yet, when they are very weary, soldiers may slumber while on the march, couriers while on horseback, and many a person falls asleep bolt upright in his chair while engaged in trying to read a heavy article. Some people have much greater aptitude for sleep than others, and here and there one is found who makes it a deliberate business to doze away a large portion of his life, like the somnolent Hibernian,who, when asked by his employer how be could manage to sleep so much, replied, "Sir, I pay attention to it." A man who is used to it will slumber as soundly inside a copper boiler while a dozen bammers are driving rivets on the outside as he would anywhere else, and is liable to wake only when the clatter suddenly ceases.

It has been remarked that if one should lie down on a revolving wheel he would tally evening. Some say that the mind never sleeps, and that it is only the suspense of memory that prevents us from recalling all its operations during the period of boddy slumber. Although not a Freemason I had entertained favorable opinions of an institution to which Washington, Franklin, and Larayette belonged. On my refusal to print his book Morgan removed to Batavia, where he made the acquaintance of David C. Miller, editor of the Advocate, also a Mason, who became his publisher. I pass briefly over a series of facts which were judicially established, embracing the arrest of Morgan, his conveyance to and confinement in the county jail at Canandaigea, from which he was released and conveyed by night in close carriages through Rochester, Clarkson, and along the Ridge road to Fort Niagara, in the magazine of which he was centined. While thus confined a Knight Templar encampement was installed at Lewiston. When at supper,, the zeal and enthusiasm of the Templars beying been aroused by speeches who became his publisher. I pass briefly over Templars beving been aroused by speaches and wing, Colonel William King, of Lock-port, invited four men (Whitney, Heward, Chulebuck, and Garside) from their seats at the bangueting table into an adjoining apartment, where he informed them that he had an order from the Grand Master (De Witt Chinton), the execution of which required their assistance. This party was then driven to Niagara, reaching the fort a little before 22 o'clock.

Upon entering the magazine Colonel King informed Morgan that his friends had completed their arrangements for his removal to and residence upon a farm in Canada. Morgan walked with them to the whart, where a bost was held in readiness for them by Elisha Adams, an invalid soldier, into which ply the party passed and rowed away, Adams remaining to warn the boat off by signal if on its return any alarm had been giveb. It was nearly 2 o'clock in the morning when the boat came back, having, as Adams expressed it, lost one man, only five of the six being on board when the boat returned. When the boat reached a point where the Niagara river empties into Lake Ontario, a rope being wound around Morgan's body, to either end of which a sinker was attached, the was thrown overboard. It is due to the memory of Governor Clinton to say that Colonel King had no such order and no authority to make use of his name. It is proper, also, to add that none of these men surgive. > GIVING A BRAKEMAN A LESSON OF STYLE .-[From the Detroit Free Press]-The first man was a railroad brakeman, who had been celebrating his grandfather's birthday. "You run on the cars, eh?" asked the court. "Yes, sir."

"And you belong to that class of men who open the door as the train stops at Pontise, and yell out, 'Upontyack!' at the passengers?" The mun was silent. "It makes my bones boil when I think of how I've been used on these railroads," continued his Honor. "The seats are locked, the water-cooler empty, the windows won't stay up, and every few minutes you open the door and cry out 'Jawkun' for Jackson, FOR NEW YORK .- The or 'Ki-a-zoo' for Kalamazoo. I believe Ph mark you for six months."

"Please, str." protested the prisoner.
"I must strike a blow at this great evil somewhere, and I might as well commence on you."

"Please, sir, I was never here before, and it's my first drunk in four years." His Honor leaned back and chewed the corner of a blotting-pad while he reflected. Finally he said:

Bismarck's shoemaker in Berlin is notorious for breaking his promise. One morning he was aroused at 6 o'clock by a messen-ger with the simple question, " Are Herr Von Bismarck's boots ready yet?" The maker said " No." In ten minutes another messenger arrived. Loud rang the bell, "Are Herr Von Bismarck's boots ready yet?" "No." And so it went on every ten minutes until the boots were ready in the evening. The shoemaker never disappointed with dispatch, and no charge made except actual bim again.

In our ordinary dreams there is the same sense of reality which we have in the affairs of our waking life; and yet we may have a sort of vague consciousness that there is something incongruous and absurd in the strange things which seem to be going on around us. Somethnes we have a dream within a dream, or oream that we are dreaming, and the faculty of reason is tolerably wide awake, while other powers of the mind run riot.
